Grammar

About the Language

A In the first three Stages, you met sentences like this:

ancilla ambulat.

The slave-girl walks.

mercator sedet.

The merchant sits.

servus currit.

The slave runs.

All of these sentences have a noun (ancilla, mercator, servus) and a word indicating the action of the sentence, known as the verb. In the sentences above the verbs are ambulat, sedet, currit.

In all the sentences you met in the first three Stages, the verb ended in -t.

B In Stage 4, you have met sentences with ego and tu:

ego ambulo. I walk.

ego sedeo. I sit.

ego curro. I run.

tu ambulas. You walk.

tu sedes. You sit.

tu curris. You run.

C Notice the three different forms of each word:

ego ambulo.

tu ambulas.

tu sedes.

tu curris.

ancilla ambulat.

servus currit.

Notice also that the words ego and tu are not strictly necessary, since the endings -o and -s make it clear that I and you are performing the action of the sentence. The Romans generally used ego and tu only for emphasis.

D The following example is rather different:

ego sum iratus.

I am angry.

tu es iratus.

You are angry.

servus est iratus.

The slave is angry.

E Further examples:

1 Caecilius recitat. ego recito.

2 Quintus dormit. tu dormis.

3 tu laboras. servus laborat.

4 Syphax servum habet. ego servum habeo.

5 ego pecuniam trado. tu pecuniam tradis.

6 Pantagathus est tonsor. tu es mercator. ego sum poeta.

7 ambulo; circumspecto; circumspectas; es.

8 sum; audio; audis; habes.

Practice

Practicing the Language

A Write out each pair of sentences, completing the second sentence with the correct verb from the parentheses. Translate both sentences.

1 ego sum mercator. ego navem (sto, habeo).

2 ego sum servus. ego in culina (habeo, laboro).

3 tu es ancilla. tu suaviter (venis, cantas).

4 tu es mendax. tu pecuniam (debes, ambulas).

5 ego sum Syphax. ego ancillam (vendo, ambulo).

B Write out each pair of sentences, completing the second sentence with the correct verb from the parentheses. Translate both sentences.

1 ego sum coquus. ego cenam (coquo, coquis, coquit).

2 ego sum Hercules. ego fustem (tenes, tenet, teneo).

3 tu es amicus. tu villam (intro, intras, intrat).

4 tu es iudex. tu Hermogenem (convincit, convinces, convinco).

5 Syphax est venalicius. Syphax ancillam (vendo, vendis, vendit).

C Choose the correct form for the word in parentheses. Then translate the sentence.

1 (argentarius, argentarium) in foro sedet.

2 Caecilius (mercatorum, mercator) salutatur.

3 "(navem, navis) non adest," inquit Hermogenes. "quid quaeris?" inquit Caecilius.

4 "(pecunia, pecuniam) quaero," respondet mercator Craecus.

5 Caecilius pecuniam tradit, sed Hermogenes non est (probus, probum).

6 quis est mendax? (Hermogenem, Hermogenes) est mendax.

7 iudex (anulus, anulum) videt.

D Translate into English

Grumio et leo

Celer in villa laborat. Celer picturam in triclinio pingit. magnus leo est in pictura. Celer e villa discedit.

Grumio e taberna revenit et villam intrat. Grumio est ebrius. Grumio picturam videt. Grumio est perterritus.

"eheu!" inquit Grumio. "leo est in triclinio. leo me spectat. leo me ferociter petit."

Grumio e triclinio currit et culinam intrat. Clemens est in culina. Clemens Grumionem spectat.

"cur tu es perterritus?" inquit Clemens.

"eheu! leo est in triclinio," inquit Grumio.

"ita vero," respondet Clemens, "et servus ebrius est in culina"

discedit, departs, leaves

e taberna, from the inn

ebrius, drunk

ita vero, yes

Culture

The Forum

The forum was the heart of the commercial, administrative, and religious life of Pompeii. It was a large open space surrounded on three sides by a colonnade, with various important buildings grouped closely around it. The open area, 156 yards (143 meters) long and 42 yards (38 meters) wide, was paved with stone. In it stood a number of statues commemorating the emperor, members of the emperor's family, and local citizens who had given distinguished service to the town.

The illustration below shows a typical scene in the forum. The merchant on the left has set up his wooden stall and is selling small articles of ironware, pincers, knives, and hammers; the merchant on the right is a shoemaker. He has seated his customers on stools while he shows them his goods. Behind the merchants is the colonnade. This elegant structure, supported by columns of white marble, provided an open corridor in which people could walk and do business, protected from the heat of the sun in summer and the rain in winter. On the right, behind the shoemaker, is a statue of an important citizen mounted on horseback. Behind it is one of the bronze gates through which people entered the forum. The whole forum area was a pedestrian precinct, and a row of upright stones at each entrance provided an effective barrier to wheeled traffic.

In the Pompeian wall-painting above, you see a public notice-board fixed across the pedestals of three statues and some people studying the bulletins. There were no newspapers in Pompeii, but certain kinds of information, such as election results and dates of processions, festivals, and shows, had to be publicized. This was done by putting up notice-boards in the forum.

In addition to official announcements, a large number of graffiti have been found in the forum and elsewhere in which ordinary citizens recorded lost property, announced accommodations for rent, left lovers' messages, and publicized the problems they were having with their neighbors. One example reads:

A bronze jar has been lost from this shop. A reward is offered for its recovery.

Another complains of noise at night and asks the aedile (the official who was responsible for policing) to do something about it:

Macerior requests the aedile to stop people from making a noise in the streets and disturbing decent folk who are asleep.

Some of the most important public buildings were situated around the forum. In a prominent position at the north end stood the Temple of Jupiter, the greatest of the Roman gods (see 1). It was probably from the steps of this temple that political speeches were made at election times. Speeches and announcements could also be made from a special platform in the forum called the tribunal.

To the west of the Temple of Jupiter, beneath the colonnade, were the prison and the public latrines. Just behind the temple stood a set of public baths.

Next to the temple, in the northeast corner of the forum, was a large covered market (2) which contained permanent shops rather than temporary stalls. The storekeepers here sold mainly meat, fish, and vegetables. On the other side of the forum a public weights and measures table (10) ensured that they gave fair measures.

Immediately to the south of the market was a temple dedicated to the lares, the guardian spirits of Pompeii (3), and next to that stood a temple in honor of the Roman emperors (4). Across the forum was the Temple of Apollo (9), and near the southwest corner of the forum was the Temple of Venus, an important goddess for the Pompeians, who believed that she took a special interest in their town.

We have now mentioned five religious shrines around or near the forum. There were many others elsewhere in the town, including a temple of the goddess Isis, whose worship had been brought to Italy from Egypt. The Pompeians believed in many gods, rather than one, and it seemed to them quite natural to believe that different gods should care for different parts of human life. Apollo, for example, was associated with medicine, music, and prophecy; Venus was the goddess of love and beauty.

On the east side of the forum was the Clothworkers' Meeting Hall (5), whose porch and colonnade were built with money given by Eumachia (see illustration on page 12), a successful businesswoman and priestess. As this was one of the most 'prosperous industries in the town, it is not surprising that its headquarters were large and occupied such a prominent site.

Next to the meeting hall of the clothworkers was the polling station (6), an open building where voting in the municipal elections took place. Along the south side were three municipal offices (7), perhaps used for the treasury, the record office, and the meeting room of the town council.

At the southwest corner stood the basilica, or courthouse (8). This was a large, long building with two rows of interior columns marking side aisles. At one end was a high platform on which the two senior officials, called duoviri, may have sat when hearing lawsuits. The basilica was also used as a meeting place for businessmen.

Forum – Focus of Life

Business, religion, local government: these were the official purposes of the forum and its surrounding buildings. This great crowded square was the center of much of the open-air life in Pompeii. Here people gathered to do business, to shop, or to meet friends. Strangers visiting the forum would have been struck by its size, the splendid buildings surrounding it, and the general air of prosperity.
